

The BIG Tour means a BIG day for the Azurean start-up Ellcie Healthy

"It's the Big Day to save lives and jobs!" says Philippe Peyrard, founder of the Côte d'Azur start-up Ellcie Healthy. Supported since its creation by the city of Nice and the BPI, it was perfectly natural for the start-up to accept the invitation to the Big Tour in Nice last weekend to celebrate innovation and industry in the French way.

Ellcie Healthy was proud to present its innovative and smart glasses, 100% made in France, which help to detect drowsiness while driving and to detect falls. The company, which has taken up an incredible challenge in developing its connected glasses, has made it a point of honor to design and produce its glasses in France to support and promote French know-how but also to preserve and guarantee jobs in the region.

Marketed for more than a year, Ellcie Healthy's smart glasses have already saved many lives thanks to the function of detection of drowsiness at the wheel and will soon allow the detection of fall, and many other health applications to come. Even the minister Agnès Pannier-Runacher, could not miss this remarkable e-health innovation (cf picture) 😊

About Ellcie Healthy:

Ellcie Healthy is a Nice-based startup founded in May 2016 by Philippe PEYRARD, an emeritus leader for 25 years in the Optics sector, which develops connected glasses equipped with artificial intelligence. These frames, equipped with about 15 sensors, continuously measure physical, physiological and environmental variables, to prevent risks related to the health, well-being and safety of eyewear wearers. The startup is one of the Top 50 most promising e-health companies according to the KleinBlue study published in October 2020 (out of 1,400 companies studied). The company has about 20 employees, mainly engineers and researchers who develop the connected glasses and its algorithms driven by Artificial Intelligence. Ellcie Healthy markets its glasses in the 1st optical distribution network in France (Optic 2000) under the name of PRUDENSEE®. Ellcie Healthy counts among its customers groups such as Optic 2000, Klesia, Véolia, Thales & Dassault...
